

Punctuade

1) A hungry lion slipped out of the forest into a barnyard. One evening when he saw a plump donkey, his mouth began to water, but just as he was ready to jump on the donkey a rooster crowed, he was frightened, and so turned away into the forest again. They look at that cowardly lion. The donkey brayed to the rooster, I am going to chase him and the donkey ran. After the lion went the rooster shouted! You don't know that, but it was too late. The lion had turned and killed the donkey, ah my poor stupid friend! the rooster said, "as he watched the lion eating the donkey, the lion wasn't afraid of you, but of my crowing."

2) Letters between relatives and friends are called personal letters. The most important thing in such letters is the content, don't begin with a hackneyed phrase like, I was delighted to get your letter, or I have often thought of writing to you, you use a vigorous clear chatty style.

3) That familiarity produces neglect has been long observed. The effect of all external objects, however, great or splendid ceases with their novelty, the Courtier stands without emotion in the royal presence. The music trembles under his foot, the beauties of the spring with little attention to their fragrance, and the inhabitant of the coast darts his eye upon the immense diffusion of waters without awe wonder or terror.

4) Unfortunately, we often miss a basic school lesson. Every big task consist of several small ones done precisely, and perfectly as a nation. We actually need to learn the art of breaking down our moonlit goals into small accomplishable tasks, it will reduce frustration, anxiety, depression in society and embarrassment for the government machinery too, as they don't have to defend their unkept promises.