In order to ~~get to~~ know our hidden faults, it is necessary to see what our enemies say about us. Our friends often compliment us which is what our heart desires. Firstly, it can be, that our faults do not appear as faults in their eyes or that they cherish us so much that they intentionally hide our faults to avoid making us feel sad. On the other hand, our enemy does not leave any stone unturned in his attempt to uncover our faults and to disturb us. Hence, the enemy due to his rivalry makes even a little thing appear big makes a mountain out of the molehill even though there is some truth to it as well.

Friends always focus on our good deeds while our enemies focus on our faults. Therefore, we should be more thankful to our enemies as they make us aware of our faults. If we look at it from this perspective, then enemy/foes ^{proves} ~~comes out~~ to be better than our friends.
