Education: A key to Development

There are three major schools of thoughts about freedom of children in education.

First say children should be completely unaccountable whether they are bad.

Second, children should be completely accountable whether are good and the last children should be free. The last is the most common. Those who hold the same believe education should be simply spontaneous development. This is the education that led the people toward cooperation and communities. Without education it would be uphill task. Those who allow most freedom are dependent upon degree benevolence and trained intelligence where impulse is unchecked. Through the social point of view, education must be more positive than growth. It must provide mental and moral equipment.

An Instrument Accession

The rulers of the princely states as well as Maharajah of Jodhpur had not signed the Instrument of Accession fearing of end the thrones. Maharajah of Jodhpur held meeting with Jinnah. Jinnah was aware that Hindu majority states would go to India and Jinnah gave Jodhpur a blank paper to write his conditions. Memons agent informed him and urgently requested his presence at Viceroy's house. Viceroy castigated the Jodhpur and recalled him that Jinnah could not guarantee any condition. Further, the accession to India would not end his pleasure. Mountbatten left Jodhpur to sign agreement.
