

Hollow Society

The street crime rate is exceptionally high, especially in Karachi. All this is because of unpaying attention towards the youth employment programs and accountability system.

The culprits come with criminal intention and achieve what they plan. But, the victim waits for the system to help him compensate for his social losses.

In an era where accountability is not implemented for power holders, the desperate citizens find no ground beneath their foot. They stand more responsible for the duties that are supposed to be fulfilled by the power they voted for; this is what additionally burdens their homely economic system.

The question is, what is the way forward? Just by counting a number of solutions is not going to work. Abiding solutions strictly by rule of law is a fundamental approach. If it is already part of law, then sticking to its execution must be on top of the priority list.

Society has needs which must be fulfilled by law. Same as the way food is the remedy for an empty-hollow stomach. Let the law feed society.

for an empty-hollow stomach. Let the law feed society.

On the contrary, nothing can stop society from being a hollow malaise, stuffed with crimes on every corner of the local streets under the table of powers that are left unaccountable.
