

Greeks Attitude towards Grand Objects of Nature

Primitive people of Greece never appreciated the natural beauty of their country. They, in fact, saw them as a hurdle in their life in one way or another.

Author is also of the view that they were right in their approach as abundance of mountains and forests had made their lives difficult. Same thought about sea was depicted in Homer's poetry; sea and its shore were thought to be useless areas.

Due to their (Greeks) Greeks hostility towards nature, they never depicted it in art and poetry.

No change
Greek
the
and
the
in day
are natu

No change was perceptible in Greek society unless they faced the effects of noise, dust and turbulence. Then, they felt the importance of natural beauty in their lives. So, from Alexander's day, many authors & poets etc are found who has appreciated nature in their works.

Total Words : 414

Precis Words : 125