Effect of climate conditions on human activities

The Temperate region of north Europe has positive effect on human development. As it nourishes human capacities from challenges of climate. Extreme cold numbs human activity and extreme hot provides little energy. Unlike this, moderate cold invoke human activity by acting as an obstacle. In moderate cold regions, man is busy in arduous but hopeful struggles. He strive for food, ~~and~~ shelter and other necessacities of life. On contrary, the tropic life require little efforts for such things. These different seasons of the year have different impact on human activity. In hot temperate, he is generally idle and tends to be relaxed whereas in cold temperate, he put more efforts of mind and bodies.
