

Preservation of Man's Property in a Society

According to John Lock, men chose to live in a society for legal preservation of their property. Power of society is bounded to welfare of its people. only laws can define this welfare. These laws necessarily <sup>have to</sup> be administered by honest judges to recognize the main concern of people that no power can take the property of a man forcefully. Man's property is for his own use. ~~As a result, he says~~ <sup>Hence,</sup> taxes must be imposed with their willingness.

Total words = 238

$\frac{1}{3} = 79$

precis words = 86

Idea is generally ok. Mistakes identified.

8
/ 2