

Outline:
Human development and Economic Sustainability go hand in hand

Bring maturity in your arguments

Introduction:

Economic sustainability and human development are two mutually dependent factors. The long term stability of any country depends upon its investment in human development sectors. Access to basic necessities of life such as proper health facilities, quality education, equal distribution of resources, gender equity and political stability are important indicators of economic development. However, there are several barriers that can hinder human development such as bad Governance, political instability, dependence on foreign aids and loans, social inequity, hurdles in female education, low levels of education and skill-based learning. These barriers can be overcome by adopting certain policies, such as a productive workforce, skill based learning continuity of economic policies, sustainable economic policies and technological advancements that attract foreign investments. Although human development is crucial for transforming people's lives, economic sustainability plays a vital role in paving way for long te

2) Unwin
and

3) How d
develo

a) Educa
innov

b) hum
Grove

c) fleo
thir

d) Soc
liv

e) Be
Fo

4) B

a)

b) c) d)

e)

5)

long term growth:-

2) Unwinding the terms: Economic Sustainability and human development

3) How do economic Sustainability and human development go hand in hand?

a) Educated citizens promote research and innovation in society

b) human development augmenting the Governance System in a country

c) Healthy mindsets produce innovative things

d) Sound economic policies raise people living standards.

e) Boost up trade results in increase in Foreign Direct Investment.

4) Barriers to human development causing unsustainable economy

a) Bad Governance and lack of structural reforms

b) Dependence on foreign aids and loans

c) Income inequalities rampant poverty

d) Inconsistent economic policies

e) ~~Inadequal~~ Inadequate health and education facilities.

5) How does human development lead a country towards economic sustainability?

- a) The emphasis on productive workforce
- b) The enhancement of employment opportunities
- c) The focus on skilled labour promoting economic growth
- d) Technological advancements providing access to global market.

Phrase it properly

6) Conclusion:

In a nutshell, the relationship between economic stability and human development cannot be overstated. If a country's economic policies are weak, that country ignores factors behind economic stability i.e. human development. Human development is a path towards success of long-term and sustainable economic policies. Therefore, a country must make parallel human development and economic sustainability reforms. Since, effective measures against odds including poor health facilities, poverty, political instability could pave the way towards prosperous and sustainable future.

---