Modern education theorists do not believe in treating children with love and attachments rather a chore. Students want to grow with a sense of being important as individuals rather than a victim to country's love. Teachers can make students accept their opinion or by binding the relationship with interest without altering their psychological health. The suggestion is that teachers ought to ~~to~~ teach as a hobby for like two hours rather than being burdened whole day. The affection and friendliness with students can make teacher and student in a healthy relationship -
