

Q

How can the governing structure have the capacity to neutralize threats to Internal Security of Pakistan

Introduction

To administrate the people, either on small scale or large scale, there is always a need of some sort of system or structure. The set up of different institutes to run a country, collectively called the governing structures in which different ministers and heads of different departments work under one leader that is head of state. If the governance of these elected and selected persons is effective, it can cope with any challenges to country including the Internal Security. But, in case it fails it not only lead to security threats but also other ills like inflation, crimes, unemployment, poverty etc. In case of Pakistan with some improvements to governing structure it can be made possible to neutralize the threats to internal security of the country.

Threats to internal Security of Pakistan

Insurgency:

The threat of Insurgency is always dwelling on the Pakistan's head since its independence. When Pakistan came into being in 1947, the Pakistanis started to demand a separate state for them on the name of Pakhistan. In the past some years the Insurgencies has been heard from the Balochistan. This all happened because of bad governance. The people of Balochistan has been lacking in their fundamental needs and rights. The government has not been paying full attention to them that forced them to demand separate state for them.

By improving governing structure government can cope with this security threat. In other words by fulfilling their basic needs and providing the full share in every affair of the state.

Inflation:

Inflation is the main reason that angered the people. Consequently people start

To protest against the government that can lead to riots in the country. Due to these protests economic disturbance occurs that further worsen the situation. People become difficult for police mob to stop. In result forces use shells or any other harsh tactics to control the mob. This creates a haphazard situation in the country.

By better governance methods government can work to reduce the inflation rate. By subsidising the products like oil, gas and petrol the inflation rate can be decreased to some extent.

Corruption:

Corruption can be proved as a factor that poses threats to financial security of the country. When corruption will be happened without any checks and balances. This will transfer the wealth in one specific class hands. This will create inequality. The rich will become richer and poor will become more poor. This will also lead to the illegal use of power and money. The rich will start to continuously suppress the poor. The crime rate will be increased. By contracting the corruption possibilities and by imposing checks and balances in every department of institute, security threats can be halved.

Nepotism:

Nepotism is the favouritising. In this politicians or other high-posted officers prioritize their friends and family members. The people that are not capable of some post start to govern on it.

This lead to the demerit selection this can be tracked down by selection of Merit basis.
Government have to make sure that every post is awarded to a capable candidate on merit system.

Some other factors:

There are some other factors that can be added to governing structure to handle the threats to internal security.

Increase the literacy rate:

Education is the basic building
block of every system.

By educating the more people especially in the backward areas it will be helpful for government. With education the minds of citizens will become creative. They will develop the sense of morality and ethics. This will be proved good and can reduce the crime rates at domestic level.

Remove the unemployment:

Actually, unemployment is the big factor that poses risks to security of the state. Unemployment forces people to do robbery and even murders to fulfill their basic needs. Government can provide people jobs. Industrialization is the best way to reduce the number of unemployment in the country.

Example:

Government can take inspirations from the governing system of Singapore. In 1989 the unemployment rate of Singapore was 14%. But in 2020 it came near 2%.

Create harmony among provinces

Government should take some steps to build harmony among the people of different provinces. This will avoid the ethnic riots.

Conclusion:

The Governing system can be enhanced by some amendments and measurements. This will lead country towards prosperous and peaceful era. The best governing system of the world is Singapore for last some years. Government of Pakistan can get inspiration like P.M IMRAN KHAN tried to get help in education system from prime minister of Singapore in 2020.
