

Précis 23: CSS 2000

Q.2: Write a précis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title: (20)

Besant describing the middle class of the 19th century wrote "In the first place it was for more a class apart. In no sense did it belong to society. Men in professions of any kind (except in the Army and Navy) could only belong to society by right of birth and family connections; men in trade—bankers were still accounted tradesmen—could not possibly belong to society. That is to say, if they went to live in the country, they were not called upon by the county families and in the town, they were not admitted by the men into their clubs or by ladies into their houses... The middle class knew its own place, respected itself, made its own society for itself, and cheerfully accorded to rank the deference due.)

Since then, however, the life of the middle classes had undergone great changes as their numbers had swelled and their influence had increased.

Their already well-developed consciousness of their own importance had deepened. More critical than they had been in the past of certain aspects of aristocratic life, they were also more concerned with the plight of the poor and the importance of their own values of society, thrift, hand work, piety and respectability as examples of ideal behavior for the guidance of the lower orders. Above all they were respectable. There were divergences of opinion as to what exactly was respectable and what was not. There were, nevertheless, certain conventions, which were universally recognized: wild and drunker behaviors were certainly not respectable, nor were godlessness or avert promiscuity, not an ill-ordered home life; unconventional manners, self-indulgence or flamboyant clothes and personal adornments.)

~~280~~
3

19
18
2
15
9
34

34
24
256

93
3
28
27

PRÉCIS:

Influence of middle-class people in society

In nineteenth century, it's not considered that middle class people was a ^{main} part of society. Because they were performing different jobs. They were making a relationship with society and their families while business community were not belonging to this class. However, they were not performing any abuse and lived happily in society. The number of middle-class population were growing, that also influenced their value. Because they work hard, thrift, and also helpful for lower class (poor) people. They had respected their families. They have diverse opinion that which acts are good for society.

of which are not precise = 280

Total words = 98
