3. Conclusion

Otto von Bismarck once said "With bad laws and good civil servants it's still possible to govern, but with bad civil servants even the best laws can't help". Civil servants are the core or backbone ~~of a nation~~ ^{Of the governance system,} the country as we know it would fall apart and crumble from within. One can not deny their crucial role in policy making and public service delivery, their focus on ensuring public good and welfare and their contributions towards creating a lawful society. Therefore, ~~the fate of a nation rests in the hands of civil servants.~~ ^{Do not write in passive pr}

The first and foremost ~~role~~ ^{role} of a civil servant is to understand the problems of a common man - the citizen of the state and ~~they~~ come up with a solution or number of solutions to encounter the problem through a policy. ~~Not only~~ ^{Start with a subject} a civil servant suggest amendments in existing policies, they can also help make new policies which are effective and fruitful in ~~the long-term.~~ ^{the long-term.}

Additionally ^{effective and firmly}, they also ensure public service delivery. Trash disposal, street cleaning, public education, health services ^{and information}, ~~are just a few~~ ^{Are just the few} examples of some important ~~public~~ public services that ~~a~~ civil servants are responsible for and help carry out on a daily basis for the benefit of citizens.

Secondly, civil servants are an essential part of the government and are politically impartial. This means that they focus on and ensure the public good and welfare ~~rather~~ ^{as they are accountable to the people and the elected government} rather than by carrying out the responsibilities assigned to them on behalf of the government, whose main agenda is the betterment of the people and of the state.

Lastly, and most importantly, civil servants ~~are~~ ^{To ensure} ~~and~~ ~~actively~~ contribute to ~~ensuring~~ ~~a~~ ~~lawful~~ ~~society~~, so that the public safety is not jeopardized, and public wellbeing is ensured. ~~Over~~ the citizens basic rights, such as right to life, freedom of speech, safety and security - all are safeguarded as our government institutions and the civil servants ^{performing duties on behalf of the} ~~working for the~~ government are ^{working hard} ensuring working towards doing so.

There fore, we can say that a country or nation can not succeed without its civil servants.
