THE ESSAY:

A child grows up with dreams to become a successful person by gaining knowledge, and eventually having a stable job and living a better life. But why do individuals have such dreams? The answer lies in the lifestyle of a person who grows up in a middle or lower middle class where the only dream they have is to make their future brighter for themselves and their upcoming generation. Currently in our country, the situation is not in their favour to let these dreams be fulfilled. In result, these people find alternative routes to fulfill their goals, which is to look after better opportunities away from their country. This is what reflects the idea of brain drain. In simple words, brain drain can be defined as the people of developing countries move towards developed countries for better opportunities. Brain drain can be considered a blessing in disguise as per the current situation where it has some consequences in positive and negative ways. There are certain reasons which are causing the cause of brain drain.
