

Date: _____

Day: _____

"Man is born free, but Everywhere
he is in chains"

Outline of the statement

① Introduction of the statement

you can write this statement here also

② Understanding the statement, Man is born free, but everywhere he is in chains.

③ Human was free in state of Nature.

④ Factors that manifest man is in chain everywhere.

family does not impart information

4.1) Family does not give freedom to an individual to make his decision

4.2) Employers curb the freedom of employee.

4.3) work for long time due to fear of losing job.

4.4) Cultural restricts the individual freedom.

Individual conform to established societal roles and expectations

Date: _____

Day: _____

4.4) Geographic Barriers limits the opportunities for individuals.

Individual can not access better health and education in other territory

4.5) Laws of the country put bar on freedom of individuals.

Censorship on Freedom of expression

4.6) Technological advancement has taken away the ^{liberty} individuals' ^{liberty} of man.

Companies have access to personal information Privacy

4.7) Economic inequalities keep individuals in chains

A person born in poor family have no access to better opportunities of health and education.

5) Positive impacts of these chains.

5.1) Laws imposed by the government ~~Reduce~~ maintain order and stability

5.2) Employee joins economic development for working under his boss.

Date: _____

Day: _____

6) Negative impacts of these chains.

(6.1) ~~The~~ ^{Family} ~~These~~ chains stifle the creativity and progress of individual

(6.2) Technological chains leads to invasion of privacy (6.3) Cultural roles defined by culture may sideline women of the society.

7) Conclusion

Date: _____

Day: _____

She was having a dream that when she ^{write in past tense please} grows up she will become an affluent business woman. When she ~~she~~ grew up, she was denied to pursue her goals. She was forced to sit in the four walls of home because it was not allowed in her culture for a woman to work. This manifests that how a free individual, who was born free, become the victims of the chains of the ~~society~~ culture. An individual has been put in chains by his family, employers and culture. Moreover, the geographical barriers and laws made by the country put on individual in chains. Furthermore, technological advancement and Economic inequalities ^{have curbed the} have curb the freedom of an individual. At the same, there are also some advantages of these limitations imposed on individual. ^{the laws which are formed or the legislation which government introduced} The laws made by the government maintain order and stability in it is good effort but u can write more mature statement

Date: _____

Day: _____

the country and the employed employee gain economic benefits by working for the employer. However, there are also some negative impacts of these limitations imposed on individuals. For instance, the family chains stifle the creativity and progress and the technological advancement lead to invasion of privacy of the individual. In a nutshell, man is born free, but cultural, economic and legal system restrict his freedom. Though these constraints provide stability and economic benefit, often lead to loss of autonomy and privacy.

The statement, "man is born free, but everywhere he is in chains" highlights the very fact that when an individual is born, the nature has given him complete liberty. He can live the life of his own choice. But the society, economic system, geography and technology curb his freedom. The man who was born free, now to live his life according to rules defined by ~~the~~ his culture. He has to work under the direction of someone else to earn his livelihood. He can't move freely in the world because it is restricted for him to cross the border without formal permission. ~~Due~~ to these rules and regulations tied the free man in chains which limit his freedom.

Date: _____

Day: _____

According to Jean Jacques Rousseau, man ~~was~~ in the state of nature was free, kind, merciful and cooperative. Man was living a peaceful. The ~~two~~ ~~conditions~~ man was living a simple life driven by basic needs. In Rousseau's state of nature people were free and equal. They were having the complete autonomy on themselves. They were not meant to be dictated by someone. There was no concept of social hierarchy

No one was allowed to restrict or curb the freedom of an individual. There was not social inequalities in the state of nature.

So, in the Rousseau's state of nature the man was living a free life without exploited by anyone.

There are several factors

that indicate that the man who was free in the state of nature, is now in chains everywhere.

Firstly, family does not give freedom to an individual to make his own decisions. Family often imposed certain decisions on individual according to their collective desires. For instance,

~~the~~ the family often wants to see his children a doctor or Engineer.

They abandon the choice of his children of choosing other fields. These limitations arise from the societal desire for status in the society. Consequently, such restrictions deny people the freedom to follow their dreams and keep them in chains.

Besides, the freedom of the employee is also curbed by his employer. Many organizations impose strict rules and excessive demands of work. This leaves employees with little autonomy over their body. For instance, in many industries a worker has to work for long time without adequate break, to maximize the productivity. The worker can not raise voice against these injustice rules because he fears that he would lose his jobs. Therefore, the workplace become an arena where the freedom of an individual is curtailed and put his liberty in chains.

In addition, ~~cultural~~ also restrict the liberty of an individual. Every culture has defined some rules that every person has to

Date: _____

Day: _____

Live according to these roles
For example, in many cultures of the world, the role of women
is to carry out domestic tasks and she is not allowed to work outside the home and individual has to conform to the established roles and expectations. Therefore, the culture has been also considered as a factor that put the ~~inherent~~ inherent liberty of human in chains.

Moreover, geographical barriers also limits the free movement of a person. In modern world, no person is allowed to cross the border of another country without formal permission. These limitations, limits
the opportunities for a person.
For example, if the education system of a country is not according to the standard, the individual of that country is not allowed to go freely to another country for education. These work on subject verb object formation

Date: _____

Day: _____

restrictions curb his right of getting education. Therefore, the geographical barriers ^{have} curtailed the right of free movement of an individual.

Furthermore, the law of the ~~control~~ country also put bar on freedom of individual. Countries often made some laws that suppress the freedom of expression of their citizens. For instance, many countries have installed fiber wall in order to control the narrative of the citizen against the government. This manifests that citizens are not allowed to express ~~their~~ their opinions about the government of their country. Thus, the laws that are enacted by country often put the liberty of his at stake.

Furthermore, the technological advancement has also curbed the liberty of a person. Companies and organizations have unprecedented access to user's personal data, infringing on privacy and limiting autonomy. For example, companies collect personal information through apps and devices, tracking user's activities and even location. This practice is justified on the name of enhancing user's experience. As a result, technology has become a mechanism of surveillance which leads to the erosion of freedom of the users.

Date: _____

Day: _____

Lastly, economic inequalities also keep individual in chains. The unequal distribution of wealth and resources often limits opportunities for those in lower income class. This injustice distribution of wealth force them into cycles of poverty, and dependency and deprived them of getting equal opportunities.

Date: _____

Day: _____

As a case in point, a person born in poor family have no access to better opportunities of health and education. These inequalities favour the wealthy and offer them with a plenty of opportunities in every sphere of life. Hence, the economic inequalities keep the poor in chain and deprived them of getting a good life.

There are also some benefits of keeping the people in chains. The laws imposed by the government ~~produce~~ maintain order and stability in the country. If there was no such law to restrict the freedom of an individual, there would be lawlessness and anarchy in the country. For instance, criminal laws deter unlawful actions and provide justice to victims. These regulations may limit personal liberties to some extent, but they are essential for the collective good.

and ensuring a peaceful and prosperous society. Thus, the laws imposed by the government are crucial in ensuring societal balance and protecting individual rights.

Moreover, working under employers may limit certain freedoms, but it provides employees with valuable opportunities for economic development.

Employment enables a person to fulfill his financial needs and improve his standard of living.

For example, a factory worker, while bound by workplace rules, gains the ability to support his family and give them better health and education. This economic stability fosters his personal growth and societal stability.

Therefore, the checks imposed by the employer give opportunity to the employee to gain economic benefits.

Date: _____

Day: _____

There are also some negative repercussions of the chains imposed on the individual. The chain imposed by the family often stifles the creativity and progress of individuals. Many families often discourage the unconventional ideas or career paths of their child. For instance, a child is passionate about pursuing a career in arts. He might be presumed by his family to pursue career in traditional professions like medicine or engineering. These chains of the family might distract the person from his goal that will lead to frustration and affect the progress of an individual. Thus, such family constraints restrict an individual's ability to explore and realize his true potential.

Furthermore, the roles defined by the culture, may sideline ~~for~~ women of the society. In many cultures, women are given

Date: _____

Day: _____

Subordinate position to men. They are expected to conform to the roles and expectations defined by their culture. For instance, it is often expected from women that they should get married according to her choice but by the choice of their families. This manifests that the half of the population of the world are not given personal autonomy in making their decisions. Thus, the chain imposed by the culture deprives women of their autonomy.

Conclusively, man is born free, but cultural, economic, legal and geographical barriers curb its freedom. These chains on the freedom of individuals stifle his creativity and deprive them of personal autonomy. These chains often produce harmony in the country. The workers also gain economic benefits by working under

Date: _____

Day: _____

the rules of his employer. But in the ~~bro~~ broad sense, these chains ~~have~~ curb the freedom of an individual, suppress the creativity, invade privacy, and perpetuate inequalities. ultimately true freedom lies in balancing these constraints, ensuring that these chains serve as tools for empowerment
rather than barriers to progress.