

Political Unwillingness: Reason behind Uncontrolled Population Growth
 (Title with Marked)

Indent the paragraph.

Modern sociology intentionally neglects the debate on population control. It is now established that national population control is highly imperative. In absence of regulation, population will exponentially increase, reducing living standard to accommodate the newborns. The conscious and well-off people realize the situation and put efforts to control birth rate. However, the poor, unable to reflect, will continue to reproduce.

Resultantly, the population of morally and socially uncivilized will increase. Unfortunately, all sectors of society neglect this important issue for their benefits. as newborns are voters, labourers, and insurgents of the politicians, employers, and revolutionists respectively.

Religious leadership promotes unrestricted reproduction as natural right, and politicians avoid to intervene because their voters support the stance. Hence, revolutionary changes cannot come without political will.
