Population Growth : A Neglected Challenge

Now a days, deliberate neglect of addressing population question becomes a main issue in modern society. Some regulations are necessary regarding both the quality and quantity of life. If all the natural checks are removed, then the population level will be increased. As a result, living standard will be compromised.

Those who have fear of losing living standards, restrict their population growth.

But other groups of society contribute in raising population growth, causing social challenges. Politicians avoid this subject because of urban votes and employers as labours. Misguided beliefs about un-restricted procreation add to resistance. This avoidance reflects flawed priorities, as societal reforms
