A Visit to Cherokee

During his vacation, the writer and John decided to visit Cherokee. It was an uncommon place. They visited a beautiful town named Qualla Boundary which was portraying the ancient and historical ~~and~~ Indian culture of 18th century. They went to souvenir shops. George, <sup>the</sup> owner of a shop, welcomed them and asked them if they wanted anything. He further told them that he had to work from sunrise to sunset, ~~but it was still better than cutting trees to survive.~~ The writer learnt that the Cherokees <sup>did</sup> do not merely depend on trade but on other means including Bingo Weekend as well. Finally, they visited the museum where symbols of Cherokee were displayed. ~~The writer missed the place and~~ The writer is <sup>determined</sup> to visit another beautiful place.
