

The Disaster Management

In the last weekend, Odisha was destroyed by a cyclone. It came from Bay of Bengal; due to low pressure area, it moved towards land. The cyclone damaged the houses, trees, and power lines. But luckily, radars tracked the cyclone and houses were evacuated timely and people were moved towards temporary shelters. Eventually, this reduced the casualty rate. This was a significant role of disaster management in India. In another incident, Coast Guards rescued the drowning cargo ship and saved the life of sailors.
