

Manto: Unraveling Stark Realities of Life

Manto was firm in his commitment to unravel the stark realities of his life. He was oppressed by the double standards of society on piety.

His critiques charged him of spreading vulgarity. Manto revealed extremes of sex and struggles of marginalized classes. His characters represented the emotions of lower class and middle class. Readers were able to relate to them because of similar bio-moral problems. His consciousness made him aware of the rift between appearance and reality.

Therefore, he was frustrated by the hypocrisy of people at different levels of social strata. Manto reflected the restlessness of the society of his times.

"INCULCATING FRIENDLINESS IN TEACHER-CHILD RELATIONSHIP."

Author thinks that contemporary educational theorists neglect the importance of befriending children. Children like to be loved for their own sake. When one likes them without having any ulterior motive, they follow one's restrictions without disliking them. These teachers who adopt this behaviour are able to intervene in children's lives without disturbing their mental health. ~~Sadly,~~ Nowadays overburdened teachers are not able to keep alive their natural liking for children. ~~The young in society are tired and that makes them annoying. The teachers can not control naughty children with theories of self control only. Rather they need to inculcate friendliness in their relations with children. In~~

"COLD CLIMATE: MOTIVE FOR EXERTION"

It is in northern Europe that benefits of cold climate are apparent. Moderately cold climate acts as an obstacle that causes humans to utilize their energy. It offers difficulties that humans are hopeful to overcome. On the contrary, obstacles that are insurmountable results in hopelessness. And ease in life causes no motivation to act. Humans living in cold climate need to build strong houses, arrange for warm clothes, firewood and abundant food. In comparison, humans in the tropics need little effort to avail all these necessities. Even humans experiencing multiple seasons can feel the difference. In summers, humans are prone to lethargy. While, in winters, humans are motivated for exertion;

both physically and mentally.
