

Violated Children Rights

The contemporary world has been grappling with multifaceted challenges marked by widespread conflicts, water scarcity, food crisis, and global warming. The people of every age are bearing the brunt of these challenges. However, the most affected from these challenges are ~~that~~ children who have no choice, but to surrender their right to live and thrive.

The UN Children Fund (UNICEF) has published its report pertaining to violated children rights in 2024. The agency ~~states~~ <sup>claims</sup> that children are the most affected human beings due to growing conflicts. Currently, more than 473 million children are living in conflicted areas, such as Lebanon, the state of Palestine, Iraq, Syria, Afghanistan, Yemen, and Ukraine. Children are asset of any nation who are physically and mentally prepared to lead the nation. However, the growing conflicts are pushing children towards insecurity. Moreover, the UNICEF has reported that by the end of 2023, more than 46 million children had been out of school, which have been, obviously, risen in 2024. This is the worst ~~total~~ situation since ~~World War II~~, the ~~Children have been facing severe economic, social, and mental challenges.~~

The growing food insecurity marked by disruption in food supply chain crisis is another looming threat for the children.

Since the ~~beginning of~~ beginning of war in 2022 and Ukraine, the global food market has been passing through a challenging situation, often driven by skyrocketing food prices and cut in supply chain. The immediate victims of food crisis are children, who cannot get enough food to maintain balanced growth. The UNICEF claims that among the whole global population, 30 percent are children, and majority of them are malnourished due to conflicts in the world and blockage of food supply chain.
