Do add conclusion here also

Having faced with numerous problems since its inception, Pakistan also suffers from extensive educational crisis. Education crisis in Pakistan is a major issue ~~which serves as a basis for many problems.~~ However, this is not a herculean task to address and resolve the issue.

Serves as a basis is a positive term

To begin with, the insufficient funds being allocated to education sector is the leading cause of this very crisis. Its result can be seen in the form of lack of infrastructure, poor infrastructure of public schools, lack of trained teachers and absence of ^{essential} educational resources. Moreover, there is an alarming number of out of school children in Pakistan. DEPI reports state it as 26.2 million, placing Pakistan among the countries with highest number of out of school children. In addition, substandard quality of education plays a major role in the crisis which is closely tied to the socioeconomic status of the kids. Gender disparity, an ignored and the least considered factor, is a major factor playing a proportionate role in creating educational crisis.

Again plays a major role is also a positive term

Having discussed the issues and problems in education, it is the need of the day to address these problems and overcome the challenges. The first and utmost one is for the government to increase the financial commitment to education, i.e. from 1.9% to 4% of ^{the} G.D.P which is international requirement. Updating infrastructure and increasing the access to it will play a major role in ^{enable them} improving the conditions. Teacher training programs to be arranged to provide quality education. Updating the out-dated curricula and reforming the assessment systems could be of prime help. Last, but not the least, there should be community awareness programmes and incentives to be provided to reduce the number of out of school children in Pakistan.
