

Unhappiness : Deprivation of Satisfaction

1. There are many causes of unhappiness, but the most relevant is the deprivation of some normal satisfaction in young age. In this case, a man has given his life a one-sided ^{feels} direction. However, this concept is changed. A man, ^{feel} completely defeated and seeks no form of satisfaction, ^{who} becomes the supporter of pleasure. A man which adopts wrong means to seek happiness has given up his hope. An ^{oblivious} person could be persuaded towards happiness. Some people deliberately choose unhappiness even they have an option for choosing happiness. Some people are proud of their unhappiness, because they consider that this is a rational attitude of a wise man. According to them, a man being ^{miserable} miserable is considered as miserable. Passage = 364 words

Mistakes identified.

Précis = 120 words