

2016

Translation

Common people think that law of the country and individual liberty are opposite to each other. Apparently, this statement does not seem to be wrong. Every law imposes some restrictions on the citizens. If there are more ^{number of} laws in a country, the collective restrictions are also more. Individual liberty of people is crushed under their burden due to many restrictions. On the contrary, the range of the liberty of citizens gets wide if the number of laws are less.