Challenges in dealing with children.

The author believes that educationalists overemphasize negative aspect of non intervention in children's lives. In doing so, they undermine the benefit of enjoying their company. Natural liking towards children produces fruitful outcomes without much resistance. Whereas, there is no point in instrumentalizing children for personal gains. Teachers, who cherish children presence, can easily influence their minds. Unfortunately overworked teachers lack this quality and sometimes vent their anger on kids.

Hence education should not be a full time job, allowing such teachers to get some space. These teachers believe that children misbehave without strict discipline. But instead of self control, children should be treated without any rules as no rules can replace love and affection. (115 words)
