

Title: Respect for State Institutions.

Judiciary as a state institution, demanding respect because it performs respectful duties. Also, independent judiciary ensures fair legal system. Therefore, citizens and leaders must not devalue its authority. Likewise, Legislative branch as the representative of citizens requires respect for active democracy. Similarly, respecting executive branch and eliminating trust-deficit between citizens and government officials are necessary to make it perform effectively. However, institutional collaboration leads to good governance and progress. As, actions of state leaders particularly political entities influence the institutional importance. So, respecting these institutions is not only the societal requirement but also the need of true democracy. However, rule of law, free judiciary, and transparency are the ingredients of strong nations. Hence, it is the duty of citizens to acknowledge the importance of state institutions for progressive society.

Actual words of passage: 325

No of words of precis: 113