PRECIS CSS 2013:

Culture has two aspects named: external, formal and inner ideological aspect. They have a link with each other, when one changes the other also changes. Both these types of culture are components of a given social structure. Cultural problems, therefore, cannot be studied in isolation from social problems. The cultural problems of underdeveloped countries should be solved in the context of social problems. Some of these problems originate from long years of Imperialist-Colonialist domination. Freezing up of social & cultural development when European Imperialism caught up Asia, Africa & Latin America. Colonialist-Imperialist domination increased the separation.

Grates the talent of the researchers and people capable of scientific discovery. It also keeps a check on the natural resources of a country. No one pays heed to this problem. Politicians think they will gain more votes, Businessmen consider surplus of labour, revolutionists think every child as an insurgent. Experience has shown that aspiration not desperation makes revolutions.
