A visit to Cherokee

Last May, I wanted to go for a exotic tour. Joan gave me the idea to go to Cherokee, and we went for the Cherokee. We visited the town Qualla Boundary. Its beautiful mountain scenery was like paradise. Its Oconaluftee Indian village showed the life style of 18th century and Qualla Boundary shops the Cherokee pass to the tourists. These shops were filled with rubber, tricorn, turkey feathers and tents. We met middle-aged English speaker George. He invited us for lunch. George story for hardly managing living by cutting firewoods makes me feel affluent. George told us Cherokee do not depend on Trade but also on other means of income like Bingo weekend. Our last stop was the Qualla boundary where arts and symbols of Cherokee showed. I missed that area.

- 1 God's message: Guidance for human
- 2 Soothsayer: In Ancient Greek

When a man faced the difficulties of life he wanted to talk to the super power which controls the universe. Soothsayers had the ability to conceive the message and willingness of God, that was a manual for man's action. They elucidated thunderbolt, fire direction and inward of the sacrificed animal and their desire to reach the altar, nightmare and chiromancy. There were different famous soothsayers in the earliest Greece. God didn't show himself himself but he spoke to the midpower, the prophets came and gave the message to his petitioner. All the prophecies were placed within a well-organized scheme and directly linked. Some had the duty send the decision of others to the people and some conveyed
