Freedom in Education.

According to the Author, several school of thoughts addresses the question of freedom in education. Some says that freedom should be given while others debate about being subjected to Authority. Another school of thought depicts that education provide an environment suitable for spontaneous development. However, the Author disagrees with the last school of thought. He describes that education can not be viewed from the developmental perspective only. Rather, it also equips individuals with mental and moral skills that children cannot obtain themselves.
