

4. Trees give shade for the benefit of others and while they themselves stand in the sun and endure scorching heat, they produce the fruit by which others profit. The character of good men is like that of trees. What is the use of this perishable body, if no use of it is made for the benefit of mankind? Sandalwood — the more it is rubbed the more scent does it yield. Sugarcane — the more it is peeled and cut into pieces, the more juice does it produce. Gold — the more it is burnt, the more brightly does it shine. The men who are noble at heart do not lose these qualities even in losing their lives. What does it matter whether men praise them or not? What difference does it make whether riches abide with them or not? What does it signify whether they die at this moment or whether their lives are prolonged? Happen what may, those who tread in the right path will not set foot in any other. Life itself is unprofitable to a man who does not live for others. To live for the mere sake of living one's life is to live the life of dogs and cows. Those who lay down their lives for the sake of a friend, or even for the sake of a stranger, will assuredly dwell forever in a world of bliss.

5 We must insist that...

Avoid using informal words such as doesn't etc

14-02-24

Day 3

Indent the paragraph.

Characteristics of Nobel Men

The effective use of a man's life is to ^{live} live for the greater-good of others around him. Even if it comes, at the high price of self-sacrifices. These self-sacrifices help him become the best version of himself. He ^{keeps} keep going the path of benefiting others and ^{does not} doesn't pay attention to the critics. Additionally, it is very selfish and unadvantageous to live only for oneself. ^b Because those who live for ^{others} other live forever.

Idea is ok. Sentence structure needs improvement. Mistakes identified.