

Tour to Cherokee

Last May, the writer had difficulty in choosing a peaceful yet exotic tourist destination. So, John suggested him Cherokee, a country of Oklahoma. They landed its town Qualla Boundary: rich in natural and cultural beauty. Despite the language barrier, they managed to find the souvenir shops. They were surprised when a native George greeted them in English and asked them if they wanted anything. Later he invited them for lunch. He told them about his tough routine during peak season, but he was happy. He added that his tribe would have to organize Bingo weekends during off season where different games would attract the tourists. Finally the writer and John visited the museum: full of amazing artifacts. On return, the writer missed his trip and desired for another such one.

Climate effects on humans

In northern Europe, moderate cold weather has positive effects on humans. Cold weather creates troubles to work but it also stimulates strength. Unlike intense cold and hot climates, normal cold weather gives physical energy and power to work more productively. People belong to normal cold weather work with ease and manage to keep their houses warm. They enjoy sunny weather in an open area having delicious meals. Contrarily, the tropic life is altogether different. People in tropic region hardly need some clothes to wear where they spend their day under a shady tree with limited food. Life changes as per the change of the season. The summer weather makes people idle and reckless. However, moderate cold weather makes life easier and more comfortable for people to manage their affairs.
