

Only a healthy population can be an asset for a country

Outline

1- Introduction

Thesis statement: Undoubtedly, only a healthy population can be an asset for a country. But, another school of thought believes otherwise; however, the given arguments are not substantive. Therefore, it is beyond any doubt that a healthy population can only be an asset for a country.

2- Discussing the benefits of a healthy population

3- Only a healthy population can be an asset for a country

- a) Widened contribution to the economic sector
- b) National cohesion with respect to social, cultural, and religious norms
- c) Reduction in expenditure of the government
- d) Preservation of human resources
- e) Frequent human capital and human development

4- Only a healthy population can not be an asset for a country

- a) Rise of brain drain at peak
- b) Intensive extremism provoking mindsets of the youth

START FORM HERE

- c) Birth of social disorganization in Pakistani society
- d) Threat of food crisis and severe food insecurity
- e) Disparity among the upper and the lower classes

5- A healthy population can only be an asset for a country

- a) Increase in revenue generation because of remittances
- b) Filling harmony between the youth and the state through media
- c) Promotion of civic engagement to contribute national asset
- d) Reformation in structural sector of the country
- e) Strengthen democratic norms supporting political stability

6- Conclusion

