

PRECIS 2017

In the temperate countries of the northern Europe, the advantages of cold are obvious/noticeable. A cold season stimulates energy as a motivating challenge. Because, without facing challenges, one can't struggle hard to overcome many obstacles. ~~Similarly~~. Hot climate doesn't ~~act as~~ ~~motivating~~ ~~obstacle~~ encourage much activity, ~~and~~ and extreme cold makes people feel sluggish. However, moderate cold is believed to energize and invigorate. People struggle as they need to build strong homes and get warm clothes to stay comfortable. Life in the tropics is quite different. Near the equator, there is minimal need for clothing or fire, and one can spend the entire day easily without risking health. Furthermore, human behavior in hot weather is lethargic, where as in cold season, it is inclined to more energetic efforts.
