

PART - II

QUESTION #02

Title: Implications of international law and state sovereignty.

International law is different from domestic law in its nature, implications and social context. It is not altogether binding on states, hence critics disagreed with its nature being legal. If it exists and implied on states, their sovereignty is not prevalent then. Theory of consent declared the interconnectedness of international law and sovereignty. Every entity seeks it differently, some regards it a fiction, others claims that it can ensure peace on earth if drafted properly.

QUESTION # 03

01

"ad hominem" is an argument directed against a person, rather than a position he is maintaining. For example the policies of president Franklin Roosevelt ^{were} ~~were~~ criticized to be ineffective, because he was crippled.
