

Translation 2016

It is generally believed that

According to ordinary people, the laws of a country clash with the freedom of an individual.

Outwardly, this stance seems to be correct. Every law imposes certain restrictions on the citizens.

If the number of laws are more, the collective restrictions are also more. These increased prohibitions crush the liberty of a person.

On the contrary, the lesser the number of laws, the more ~~the~~ ^{are} liberty citizens enjoy.

Sentences of Idioms:

(1) Go bananas — When ever there is a sale on her favourite brands, she goes bananas.

(2) Groan inwardly — He groaned inwardly at ~~the~~ ^{his} racist remarks.

(3) Chicken out — After seeing the physique of his opponent, the wrestler chickened out.

(4) Beard the lion in the den:
Asking ^{my boss} for a day off ~~from~~ ~~my boss~~ was just like bearding
the lion in the den.

(5) Smash hit - Aki's business proposal was a smash hit.

(6) Place in the sun - After months of struggling to pass his exams, he finally found a place in the sun.

(7) Spirit away - She spirited away
from the cheering crowd
in a blink of an eye.

(8) Eager beaver - Aki loves to work on new projects; he is one eager beaver.

(9) Be left holding the baby - The team leader resigned under pressure leaving other members to hold the baby.

Indent the paragraph.

The Misfortune That is Envy

Envy is one of the curses of human nature by which ~~he~~ ^{man} keeps others and himself unhappy. The person relies on pain instead of pleasure and denies others happiness as well. This can be deadly. There are some questions that even envy cannot answer ~~such as why one person has to be happy while other is sad.~~ ^{has to suffer} The increased feeling of admiration can reduce envy and happiness is the ultimate cure of it. Some say that they cannot feel happiness but to accept the feeling can lead towards betterment.

 (words = 92)
 (words of passage = ~ 250)