

Role of International law in sovereignty

Write the complete word. of a state

Binding rules for persons are exercised through court law and for state through international law. Laws for state are not influenced by society but by imposed restrictions of <sup>international</sup> Int. Community. Individual's laws are binding but state's laws are not compulsory. There is objection of lawyers' expertise over this least effective legal system. Presence of <sup>b</sup> binding rules make any state less sovereign. But theory of consent opposed it and stated that sovereignty of state depends on their behaviour towards binding rules. If they agree over these limitations, it depicts their sovereignty. Some believe the existence of peace when this task will be under political concern. Nevertheless, existence of state sovereignty depends on following the rules and orders of international law system.
