Topic: Wars and Civilizations: An ~~In Depth~~ Analysis of Historical Integration

In examining the downfall of civilizations, the writer ~~found out~~ ^{found out} ~~assures~~ that the war has been the main factor of breakdown of every civilization. Like other evils, war becomes intolerable only, when people are unable to escape from its wrath. In early stages of civilization, the perils of war overshadow its sufferings. War does not begin to show its wrath until it consumes all the physical and political ability of man's industry and intelligence. War reveals its true face only, when it mobilizes the substantial resources of societies for war. In past, when the peribious nature of war has been unidentified, efforts were made to eliminate war; ^{the evil of war} these have taken two ~~main~~ ^{ways} paths. The first ^{way} is for individuals to personally reject any involvement in war and second ^{way} focuses on convincing governments to unite against aggression. ^{the} Writer's ~~experience~~ concludes that, the latter one, although unheroic is more promising.
