Title: Role of Climate on Human Nature

Temperature regions of North Europe suggest that cold weather is ~~conductive~~ conducive to human development as it demands hard work and hope, irrespective of hot weather. Every weather has a different impact on human nature. In the average cold season, man's survival depends on securing food, shelter, and other basic needs. He needs protein-rich food for the sharp working of the body's tissues. But, it is quite different in the tropical region. People require simple clothes and shelter for survival. Moreover, there is no need to dig the earth, as vegetables are enough for food. Similarly, in the summer, humans are relaxed, but in winter, they are sharp and active. (114/342)

Title: Educational Institutional Role in Human Intelligence

The effective use of human intelligence during the services of care, love, and philanthropy can secure humans. This challenge must be taken by teachers in educational institutions because the clergies have not fulfilled their duty. Although, it was their moral duty; however, sexual and wealth lures were hurdles to completion. On the other hand, practical men did not focus on social morality because they thirsted for power and linked morality with power. This thirst leads to devastation. Therefore, the education sector has the power to train human intelligence for social morality, love, personal integrity, and human understanding.
