The idiom he who has the stick gives the buffalo better describes the world puttics. The person, who has the stick in power, makes the buffalo do whatever he desires. In terms of world politics, the stick relates to being a superpriser and buffalo relates to the world polities. Superpowers control the world politics and according to their desires, it keeps changing. Economy, défence, foreign affairs education, health human development and so on of a developing country langely depends upon the will of the superpowers. Whether world peace is a choice of superpowers or not is a question widely asked. Historical events and the current world politics prove that it is the superpowers who determine peace in the world. Their actions and policies show that instead of peace, they want to end the hegemony of their rival place their watchdogs in different regions, and supporting other countries for their own benefit. One can come to know about this approach of superpowers through roles played by America in WWI and WWII. America through its clever peace policies ended empires in INWI and closed the chapter of superpowers in WWIII, and paved its way to become superpoort. Secondly, the events in Middle East, which include establishment of Asrael on a colonized territory, wars in Syria, Yenen and drag, show how superpowers under the banner of peace-beavers fulfill their own desire. Thirdly the wars fought on the lands of Afghanistan explain how underdeveloped countries face destruction when the rival superpowers dealars themselves as peace-makers and try to bring peace. Moreover, the superpowers move or policy to make developing
