

Process and functions of management in Organization

Organizations are based on objectives for the fulfillment of the needs of mankind. These organizations conduct various studies in order to narrow down the requirements which in turn helps in distribution of utilities. For this to be done, organizations use various acts which are purposeful in nature. Before Industrial revolution, there was only simple hierarchy on the basis of which small enterprises used to run. But with passage of time, the need of complex hierarchy in management and objectives became essential. In this hierarchy, every contributor played his part. So, for proper organizational efficiency, efficient management system along with co-ordination among contributors for the accomplishment of objectives is equally important.

Total words: 324

Words written: 108