

A society that has more justice needs less charity.

1- Introduction

Thesis statement: Justice is the building block of a peaceful society. It lessens the need for charity. Thus, paving a way for successful independent society.

2- Contextualizing charity as a gap of justice system.

~~3~~ The society that has more justice needs less charity.

a- accountability lessens corruption that saves funds

b- smooth functioning of policies prevent leak buckets

c- equal opportunities avoids socio-economic problems like crime

d- lessens the pressure of interest group demands

e- ensures maximum revenues and creates the ability to have a say at international forums.

4- Charity is a curse for developing world.

- a- meddling in elections by powerful countries
- b- suppresses the middle and poor class of a society through policies
- c- sparks gender inequality
- ~~d- interference in judicial proceedings~~
- d- cases like regime change
- e- insecurities the assets of a country

5- Justice implementation techniques ~~is~~ a tool to prosperous society

- a- using e-governance e.g. singapore
- b- cutting expenditures and invest in production ~~extra~~ units
- c- enhancing education system e.g. ~~educati~~ case study of Japan
- d- Stable government and policies

6- Conclusion

A Society that has more justice needs less Charity

1- Introduction

Since effective justice system ensures strong institutions that make the society self-sufficient and bring marginalized to the mainstream. Hence, it is true to say that a just society lessens charity.

2- Contextualizing the 'Charity' as an outcome of injustice

3- A just Society lessens Charity

(a)- Human development is a concern in a just society that reduces charity

(b)- Fulfillment of socio-economic needs is a manifestation of social justice

(c)- Accountability and transparency without disparity give rise to equal access to resources.

(d) - Provision of justice and crime rate are inversely proportional to each other.

(e) - Justice ensures the provision of everyone's due right that often eradicate social problems like poverty and unemployment.

4. Increased charity damages the fabric of society

(a) - Increase charity in a society further leads to social problems.

(b) - It often impacts the decision making power of developing countries regarding their financial policy.

(c) - It hinders economic growth of the country as people become parasite.

5. Recommendations to improve justice in a society

(a) - Strong state institutions are required to ensure justice.

(b) - Independent Judiciary and supremacy of Law

(c) - At ~~an~~ individual level,
enhancing ~~superego~~
enhance the importance of justice among citizens.

6- Conclusion