

Security Threats

Any type of malicious activity or attack that could potentially cause harm or damage to an organization, country or globally harmful is called security threats.

Global security threats are ransomware, terrorism, climate change, cyber attacks, cold war, health threats etc. Similarly, Pakistan's poses a new security threats.

The ~~country~~ government has alluded new security threats <sup>in 2024</sup> as terrorism, the rise of separatism movement in Balochistan, the resurgence of Taliban ideology, the reemergence of extremist elements, and threats related to missing personalities.

Concurrently, a fresh debate has emerged concerning Pakistan's foreign policy towards Afghanistan and its stance on military.

The connection between the rise in terrorist attacks and the presence of illegal immigrants is highlighted specifically after Mastung incident in late ~~2024~~

— / — / — 2023

September 2023. It encompassed a larger debate on Islamabad's policy towards Afghanistan, especially concerning the TTP and the evolving militancy landscape. In a nutshell, the controversial decision to repatriate illegal migrants is proving ineffective for Pakistan, as national security concerns persist. Acknowledging the intricate dynamics of Pak-Afghan relations and the looming threat of TTP expanding into Balochistan, Pakistan must unite and establish consensus at the government and public levels. In dealing with political instability, Pakistan cannot afford renewed tensions in Balochistan or the persistence of terrorist activities within the state.