

Importance of Music and Reading Books in Life:

Life is in itself a quite complex thing we have ever turned focus to. We people normally take it for granted and consider it a normal phenomenon. However, in its substance and essence life is not as we have construed it. Life is a complex mixture of rational and irrational feelings, moods and thoughts. People, who are utterly busy in the business of world, never get a chance to seriously reflect on their lives. Hence, to them life seems one of the normal phenomena which hold not that significance to be given spared sometime for it. Resultantly, their assessments and evaluations of their lives are based on extraneous grounds than the life itself.

To this day, I also engendered the same sought sort of perspective on life. My reflections on life were not based on giving true endeavours to know the life for the sake of life; however, their drivers were always extraneous factors. Notwithstanding, whenever I read literature and listened to music, my mind compelled me to think otherwise. Undeniably, ~~during~~^{while} doing these activities, curiosity always increases to know this complex thing (which is actually the center of what is going on and happening in the world).

Honestly speaking, I always wonder regarding the complexity of life. More or less, everyone notices how our thought process and outlook of the world changes when we allow literature to take front seat in our lives. Literature, whether in the form of literary books or music, avails us a window from which world looks completely different than that of our naive interpretations of it. We stop hating people, we see every human life a marvelous and unique creation of Almighty God. Moreover, we do not see ourselves more important than everyone else. Literature equips us with multitude of perspectives through various characters in literary pieces. It puts open mental functioning of its characters to acquaint us with their feelings, moods and thought processes as if we literally connected with it ^{them} in ^{the} ^{same} form. However, in outer world, we, except ourselves, know nothing about others' mental outlook of the world. Thus, it epitomises how much important music and books are in shaping our opinion regarding this cosmos we are part of.
