

Passage:

Trees give shade for the benefit of others, and while they themselves stand in the sun and endure the scorching heat, they produce the fruit of which others profit. The character of good men is like that of trees. What is the use of this perishable body if no use is made of it for the benefit of mankind? Sandalwood, the more it is rubbed, the more scent does it yield. Sugarcane, the more it is peeled and cut up into pieces, the more juice does it produce. The men who are noble at heart do not lose their qualities even in losing their lives. What matters whether men praise them or not? What difference does it make whether they die at this moment or whether lives are prolonged? Happen what may, those who tread in the right path will not set foot in any other. Life itself is unprofitable to a man who does not live for others. To live for the mere sake of living one's life is to live the life of dog and crows. Those who lay down their lives for the sake of others will assuredly dwell forever in a world of bliss.

Title:

1. Living for others should be the purpose of life.
2. Divine bliss is in benefiting others.

Precis:

Trees tolerate the heat of sun and provide shelter for others. Different plants provide benefit while bearing harsh times like sandalwood and sugarcane. A man should also be like trees. He should not provide harm to others and should be beneficial for others. Life is of no use if a man live only for himself like dogs and crows. Those who live for others must enjoy divine bliss.

