The Essay

This is not a definition of brain drain

Brain drain is the brain's way of telling a nation that its potential is not being realized. Brain drain is a global issue with local consequences. Human capital plays a vital role in country's progress, peace, prosperity and stability. But there should be provided with opportunities and resources also to realize their full potential. Brain drain is neither a new issue nor its a fully settled. Developed countries are less effected with the phenomenon. While underdeveloped countries are drastically effected. Unfortunately Pakistan is one of them. The relentless exodus of Pakistan's brightest minds to foreign shores has emerged as a silent crises, during last few years. Quietly undermining the nation's potential for growth and innovation. There are many leading causes behind the steady stream of doctors, engineers, scientists and academics leaving their homeland in pursuit of better opportunities abroad. The main causes are social factors (lack of security, equality of life etc), economic disparities, political, professional educational and globalization factors. As a result of these causes nations faces multiple serious issues.
