Education: A Powerful Tool.

For socio economic growth

Education is a powerful tool through which one can transform the world" by Nelson Mandela. Education is a ~~fundamental~~ ^{introduce reforms} component for everyone. Without this, no one can bring reforms in the society. Though it is vital for living a happy and prosperous life, yet people are unable to acquire education. As a result, people don't have adequate knowledge about the world and its culture. In the context of Pakistan, people are also facing the same situation because there are only 5 percent who are acquiring good education while, 95 percent of the people have been deprived from education or some of them are getting sub-standard education which ultimately proves to be fatal for them. There is a famous maxim in literature that "Incomplete knowledge is a poison." Thus, it is lucid that only five percent of educated people contrast over 95 percent of the population. In every well developed sector of the country, five percent of the people, who are educated, are dominated. It is not be wrong to say that these are those people who are rich and can affect the quality of education. In these people there are two distinctions; rich of leisure and rich of labour. Rich of leisure refers to those who don't consider and think about society and social expectation. On the other hand, rich of labour refers to those who consider themselves responsible to answer of society.
