 Brain Storming
The second of the division of the second
A CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY O
 Economic Professional & Economides factors tous of rotent educations Educati Economic Professional & economic Professional & econom factors to to content educitions brain Drain.
Boain Drain
Legina Legina
 Political Drain Drain Decline in School action of the Standard Sta is so to relaction Envisonmental St. So. Sex. factory & Biet
Envisormental Enviso Technological a de foct & g 3
3 00
3 3,

2
E Sold Sold Sold Sold Sold Sold Sold Sold 3
Č.

Scanned with CamScanner

	brain Drain:
	Brain Drain: Causes and Consequences 0000000
	OUTLINE	ka -
	The second of th
ຳງ	Introduction
(a)	Hook
נפט	General Statement	, å, روي	Thesis Statement: Brain Drain is caused due to a number of factors including economic, professional, educational, political and social factors. Brain drain has affected a	4-1 number of developed and developing	aprent.
	countries one of which is Pakistan-Do not onliet the arguments in	the
11)	Causes of Brain draintement
(a)	Egenomic factors	285
_	Higher Salaries abroad
-	Better job opportunities	1.0
_	Lack of gob security in home countries	1
_	Higher employment rates in host countries	332
	This bearings has another on comment	(20.2
(b)	Educational factors
	Quality Education in host countries	1
_	Access to advanced academics and sesearch
(0)	Political factors	- Pro-

Scanned with CamScanner

	Drain Drain:
_	Lack of security
(d)	Social factors.
_	Better quality of life
_	Access to better healthcare and welfare.	1
	The state of the s	(4)
(e)	Technological factor
-	Advanced technology	w.
_	Digital Nomadismi and the American bono hatthou ben'in as laroinstorg
(f)	Environmental factors
-	Climate change to be to be the control of the change
-	Sustainable living
iii)	Consequences of brain drain	1
(a)	Loss of economy	(19)
رط	Lower tex revenues	-
(C)	Loss of talent
(d)	Loss of progressive and innovative makers
e)	Decline in educational standards	yes):
f)	Stagnation in various educationed fields
	British Until the Company of the Com	> (١٠٠	Examples of brain drain from Pakistan in various sectors have a large to the sector of the se
-/	Health care Unnecessary details	-
-	Academia
-1	Information technology	and the same

Scanned with CamScanner

1	THE ESSAY
V)	Policy responses and reforms
_	Return Strategies
_	Retention Programmes
	I H to a Eatler Texton of this grader by Palen
vij	Conclusion
(0)	Summary of key points
رط	The way forward
رى	Impostance for addressing brain drain for national developmentplat of smithdown of the continues blood publication and the fit terminal action afromatical List forestabilities of claystaping making their delite to council due to a number of factor world as a bor of the windless of almost and a brilled law in Leadifical, and sound feeling. Pur to the in these finetime developing angulars ase smalling til Section by minutes and best continued animal kun damadi digagga dat ta napatawa ka kusawa li One programs carried in Poststein, while is is a store the developed control of 1 - 1 bayes freshold mis see Emillion bonne-to 18 2
1	of the story for anything yard someth
-	distribution beings side and an united the same Matt of prince 3de amina Alba La Prince Date: or o

"When talent leaves, the country loses not only workers but also thinkers executive and imovators — The vary people who could lead it to a better future? This quote by Peter Drucker, clearly explains how brain drain sipes out a country of its talented professionals. Brain drain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present within our countries since long brain drain is severly impacting third. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is evoding the foundations of developing nations. Brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-wand nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its development.		T
imovators— The vary people who could lead it to a better future? This quote by Peter Drucker, clearly explains how brain drain sipes out a country of its talented professionals. Broin drain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present wiltim our countries since long broin drain is severly impacting livind. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is evoding the foundations of developing nations. brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such polity responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its	THE ESSAY	1
imovators — The vary people who could lead it to a better future. 27 This quote by Peter Drucker, clearly explains how brain drain sipes out a country of its talented professionals. Brain drain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present within our countries since long brain drain is severly impacting third. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is evolving the foundations of developing nations. Brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its	n talent leaves, the country loses not
imovators — The vary people who could lead it to a better future. 27 This quote by Peter Drucker, clearly explains how brain drain sipes out a country of its talented professionals. Brain drain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present within our countries since long brain drain is severly impacting third. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is evolving the foundations of developing nations. Brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its	vorkers but also thinkers executives and
Drucker, clearly explains how brain drain sipes out a country of its talented professionals. Broin drain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present within our countries since long brain drain is severly impacting third. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is earding the foundations of developing nations. brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its	tors - the vary people who could lead
Drucker, clearly explains how brain drain sipes out a country of its talented professionals. Broin drain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present within our countries since long brain drain is severly impacting third. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is excelling the foundations of developing nations brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic 1 professional educational, political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its	a better future 32 This quote by Peter
out a country of its talented professionals. Broin drain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present wiltin our countries since long brain drain is severly impacting third. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is exuding the foundations of developing nations-brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistern, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its duain is not merely a new phenomenon, it has been present within our countries since long. Brain drain is severly impacting third-world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is evoling the foundations of developing nations. Brain duain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain duain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital. One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its has been present within our courties since long brain drain is severly impacting third-world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is earding the foundations of developing nations. brain drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital. One prominent example is Pakistan, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its long Brain drain is severly impacting livind. world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is exoding lite foundations of developing nations-brain durin is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain durin and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its	cen present wiltin our countries since world countries and it is high-time to take adequate action against it as it is exuding like foundations of developing nations-brain duain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain duain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its adequate action against it as it is evoling the foundations of developing nations frain durin is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain durin and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital. One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its the foundations of developing nations. brain duain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain duain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistein, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its drain is caused due to a number of factors including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital. One prominent example is Pakistern, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its including, economic, professional educational, political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital. One prominent example is Pakistan, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its political, and social factors. Due to lack in these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain durin and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital. One prominent example is Pakistern, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its these factors developing nations are significantly facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistern, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its facing brain drain and host countries are taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistern, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its		ч taking advantage of the capable human capital One prominent example is Pakistan, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its		1
One prominent example is Pakistan, which is losing its talent to developed countries. Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its		ital
Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its	· ·
Third-world nations are in utmost need to improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its improve their conditions and craft such policy responses, which enable talented individuals to stay and work within the country for its stay and work within the country for its		u
Stay and work within the country for its	The state of the s	V
Ol velopint (1)		1
	Suscisi ~	1
		-