

Precis

The Business of a judiciary (the court & judges), broadly speaking, is the impartial interpretation of law as between government and citizens, or between classes of citizens who dispute with one another. The government, for instance, charges a man with treason, (acting against one's own country); obviously he's deprived of something essential to his freedom if the law is the acts which the government seeks to have accepted as treason. Here, obviously the judge has to be assured that this independence must be maintained with safety to himself. He must not suffer ~~within~~ ~~the~~ ~~power~~ in his person or position because of the views he takes. It must not be within the power either of the government or other persons to deprive him of his authority. because, as best he may, he applies the law. This, as I think, makes it essential that all judiciary appointments should be held during good behaviour. This may be an age-limit of services, of course; but again, apart, nothing should permit the removal of a judge from the bench except corruption or physical unfitness.

Judicial System : Rights and Safety of Judges

The Role of The Judiciary include impartial Interpretation of laws (for both government and citizens), for which rights and safety of judges must be ensured. including right to independent decision making (that must not be influenced by anyone), Right to safety, Right to confidence in decision provided by government and people/citizens and most importantly, right to service safety that judges ^{must not} ~~cannot~~ be removed from their bench except of Age limit, corruption or factors like being physically unfit.
