Different climates, Different Needs

The northern European countries have the beneficial effects of cold climate. Cold climate seems to trigger energy by acting as invincible barrier and cause energies to despair. But extreme cold makes human energies insensible and hot climate motivate them for little effort. In modest climate man is doing onerous efforts of constructing strong houses and need warm clothes. Man needs to extract resources from earth to fulfil his needs. In open air he will suffer from freezing wind. He has to obtain nourishing food for himself. But in the neighbourhood of the equator have little need of warm clothes.

and living a comfortable life without any danger under the shades of tree. They can obtain little food without much exertion. There is differences between human nature in normal and tropic climate.
