

Why I Want to be a CSP Officer?

One day a man was walking along the beach when he noticed a boy picking up starfish and throwing them back into the ocean. Approaching the boy the man asked, "excuse me, what are you doing?" The boy replied, "throwing starfish back into the ocean, the Sun is rising and the tide is going out and if I don't throw them back, they will die." The man laughed himself and said, "but there are too many starfish on this beach, you can not possibly make a difference". After listening to the man politely the boy bent down picked up another starfish and threw it into the ocean then turning to the man, the boy said, "I made a difference to that one". So the moral is that every individual can make a difference, even if that difference is only felt by one person. We may not be able to save the whole world, but we can do something. It is very important to do, what we can, to make a difference. That is why I want to be a civil servant of Pakistan because a CSP has the ability to work directly with those who need help and make a positive impact in their lives either directly or via their role in policy-making. In addition I want to be a CSP because of job security, respect in society, to make my parents proud, for guaranteed salary, health benefits and last but not least the immense amount of knowledge

I could gain during this journey.
