TITLE: ROLE OF AFFECTION IN EDUCATION

The author thinks modern educational theorists are inclined towards negative virtue of not interfering with children and too less with positive side of enjoying their company. If people start loving their children as they do with their pets, children will respond to parents suggestion and accept prohibition. It is a useless way to love children that consist of an idea of treating them as social endeavor. No child will be grateful to thought that he will have to secured a vote for your party and sacrificed himself for 'country'. The desirable sort of interest is that which is free from any ulterior purpose. Teachers with this quality should interfere in children's freedom without causing psychological damage.

However, it is impossible for overworked teachers to pay attention on certain students because ^{teachers} they are bound to feel towards student as whole. Lack of discipline develops fatigue in ~~young~~ ~~people~~ ~~society~~ of young people young ones which ultimately brings irritation that is somehow likely to express itself. Only friendly behavior is not enough though, but unnecessary rules for naughty children are also not helpful because ~~substitute~~ of no ~~love~~ and rules are substitute of love and affection.
